THURSDAY EVENING, SEPTEMBER 11.

BEST.

Don't insult a poor man. His muscles may be well developed.

Don't color merchandise for a living. It is simply dying by inches.

Don't throw dust in your teacher's eyes. It will not do you any good.

Don't turn over your nose at lightthings. Think of bread and taxation.

Don't boast of your pedigree. Many a fool has had a wise ancestor.

Don't buy a coach to please your wife. Better make her a little saddle.

Don't write long obituaries. Save some of your kind words for those living.

Don't publish your acts of charity. The Lord will keep the account straight.

Don't put on strain in your new clothes. Remember your tutor is suffering.

A Gorilla from the west coast of Africa is now housed in the Crystal Palace, London. The chimpanzee and the orang-outang have arms that enable them, with a slight stoop, to touch the ground, while the arm of the gorilla is not much up to par, so to a long armed human being. In the form of the hand and fingers, too, it is more like man, these being much shorter than those of the other two. Most of all its air is strikingly human, for it is small and beautifully formed, and instead of a thin, leathery skin, it is set well to the bone. It has also a well formed brow, and its dark brown eyes are lighted up with an expression that seems to speak of latent intelligence. In profile it has the exact resemblance to a little Guinea negro, the blackest of blacks, but looked at full-faced the man's total absence of nose, the flat, open nostrils, the long and powerful jaws and the vast cavity which forms the mouth, rob it of what is suggestive of the "human-like divine." When standing upright, however, the gorilla may be about two feet, but if it tries to be half grown it may attain from four to five feet.

Avoid the very appearance of heat by having your stove stored and kept until winter at Stebbins', corner of King and Columbia st., and see their new revolving Top Cook Stove.
